Message from Chair Margaret Cavin

Spring has sprung and like the nature surrounding us, the construction industry can be found blossoming across the state and nation, too. As I touched on in the last Horizon’s issue, more and more residential and commercial work is sprouting, which means opportunities are bountiful for those looking to work.

Ironically, the challenge facing many licensees is the inability to attract and retain qualified workers to meet these growing demands. The Nevada State Contractors Board understands the importance of supporting the industry in promoting careers in construction, which is why we’ve been engaged in workforce development panel presentations to high school students to join the industry in sharing the value of a lasting career in construction.

Additionally, the Commission on Construction Education recently held a strategic planning meeting and discussed new ways to attract programs designed to bring innovative strategies surrounding the promotion of careers in construction, as well as strategies specifically designed to attract demographics, such as veterans returning to civilian life, women, minorities, and younger generations. The Commission will be improving its grant application process, forms, and evaluation criteria as part of its strategic initiatives in order to better prioritize the distribution of grant funding to programs across the state.

We recognize, however, that our efforts are not stand-alone. The industry itself is investing both time and resources into the development of programs and outreach materials, as well as looking at innovative strategies for employment, such as improved benefit packages, salary advancements, education and training opportunities, etc. On any given day, you are likely to come across at least one article, one social media post, or one television segment that highlights these efforts and promotes the value of becoming apart of Nevada’s construction workforce.

You’ll also notice dedicated efforts coming from various state leaders to bolster Nevada’s workforce, develop and promote apprenticeship programs, and work within existing forums and educational institutions to expand upon what is already being achieved.

It’s not hard to see that achieving workforce development outcomes requires a united front from all angles of the respective industries. As you ponder ways to make an impact, consider looking at your own business opportunities and community connections. Can your company offer an internship program for high school or newly graduated students? If there are apprenticeship programs in your trade, what can you do to help promote and encourage people to apply for them? If you’re affiliated with non-construction related groups, consider sharing information about workforce opportunities to those who may have never considered construction an option.

Creativity and breaking the mold of how things have always been done will surely result in different outcomes, and we support the industry’s goals to breathe new life into Nevada’s construction workforce.
Message From Margi Grein, Executive Officer

Sunny skies, a bustling economy, and construction projects taking shape in nearly every sector of our communities means Nevada is hard at work!

Although we may not be out getting our hands dirty with the latest construction project, we have been working diligently in the 2019 Legislative Session to garner support for the Board’s legislative package, monitor bills that have both positive and negative impacts to our agency, the public’s safety, and industry at-large, as well as working collaboratively with legislators and interested groups on these matters.

This four month frenzy can feel daunting at times, but in the end, our Board will always appreciate the opportunity to help shape the future of the construction industry and improve efforts to ensure the public is protected.

We’ll be sending out an Industry Bulletin in the weeks ahead to highlight some of the legislative changes that were enacted into law. I would encourage you, if you’re not already, to get connected to an association who is tracking legislation of importance to the industry and/or search around on the legislative website (NELIS) to see what issues are currently in the final stages of consideration for becoming law.

Just as the industry assesses the impacts new laws will have, the Contractors Board has been keeping a close eye on its licensing and enforcement data to be able to identify significant trends for the purpose of proactively preparing for any changes or adjustments that may be necessary.

As you’ll note in this quarter’s report, we are continuing to see an increase in the number of new license applications, new licenses issued, change applications received, and the number of active licenses overall.

These positive trends are supported further with declining voluntary surrender rates, license suspensions, and reduced financial responsibility hearings.

Times are good, and the data is representative of this. However, it’s important that we remember the challenges of our past and learn from those experiences as we look to the future.

Workforce shortages are a real concern and should be taken into consideration as businesses look to expand. Being cautious to not take on more than you can handle is important to providing quality customer service and maintaining the standards and integrity of our industry.

Additionally, taking the time to properly train and educate your staff about the importance of performing work timely, correctly, and in accordance with the laws, regulations, and codes that govern the trade. Failure to implement adequate expectations, could leave your company subject to complaints being filed with the Board.

Lastly, because resources are stretched so thin, now is the time where unlicensed contractors flourish. The Board will be amping up its efforts to combat unlicensed contracting, including sting operations, site visits, investigations into complaints, and proactive community sweeps.

Every individual on your team serves as the eyes and ears of the industry. Encourage them to document and report unlicensed activity in real time, so the Board can properly address and conduct an investigation into the alleged violations. Download and use our mobile application to report unlicensed activity while in the field!

Changes Aid Contractors

The Contractors Board at its March 21 meeting adopted a temporary regulation intended to reduce barriers to licensure and provide greater portability by expanding and clarifying types of experience documentation needed for an applicant to become a licensed contractor in the state. The temporary regulation took effect April 26, 2019.

Earlier, at its February 21 public meeting, the Board approved an endorsement agreement with Louisiana. This agreement will provide greater mobility for Nevada licensees who may want to contract in Louisiana by allowing that state to endorse Nevada’s trade exams in nine classifications.

The Board is participating in the ongoing session of the Nevada State Legislature and monitoring pending laws that would bear on its operations and the services it provides. We will respond by developing and implementing programs and educational outreach to keep contractors informed. The current economic bull market has spurred construction activity, requiring similar responses in our licensing and enforcement departments.
Enforcement

NSCB’s Criminal and Compliance Investigations Divisions respond to all consumer and industry complaints against licensed and unlicensed contractors. The Board assists homeowners and licensed contractors with contracting matters, such as workmanship issues, money owing complaints and violations of industry regulations. After gathering evidence against unlicensed contractors, the Board submits cases to the local district attorney, who may file and prosecute misdemeanor, gross misdemeanor or felony charges.

Unlicensed Contractor Sentenced

A member of the Nevada State Contractors Board’s “10 Most Wanted” list of unlicensed contractors has been sentenced to at least 6 ½ years in jail for crimes against northern Nevada residents.

Lucas Hunter Schopper learned his fate at a sentencing hearing in the Second Judicial Court in Reno on January 16. Judge David Hardy ordered Schopper to spend 79 to 198 months in custody and pay court costs, fees, penalties, $3,282 in investigative costs to the Nevada State Contractors Board and restitution to his victims.

He pleaded guilty in October to three felony charges: forgery, theft and crimes against a person over the age of 60. He had been free after posting bail following his arrests in February and September 2018, prompting the Contractors Board to issue a “Consumer Alert” to northern Nevada homeowners.

Schopper, whose contractor’s license for Bella Terra Professional Landscaping Services, was revoked by the Contractors Board in 2009 for abandoning a construction project, failing to comply with the Board’s orders, receiving money and not performing commensurate work, acting beyond the scope of his license, committing a fraudulent or deceitful act, performing work that was not current with industry standards and failure to establish financial responsibility, among other violations. However, he continued to perform remodeling, landscaping, and other home improvement projects that require a valid Nevada license. His criminal record began shortly thereafter; he pleaded guilty to similar charges in 2010, 2012 and 2015.

The current case, based on evidence collected by the Contractors Board, included four cases involving projects with contract values of $19,750 to $37,693. Victims, who, had paid Schopper nearly $60,000, were allowed to present impact statements to the court during the sentencing phase. The Board has four additional cases pending against Schopper.

Since his license was revoked in 2009, Schopper has made a habit of claiming legitimate contractors’ licenses as his own. He would give discounts to people who responded to his flyers and paid before any work was completed.

The Contractors Board participated in the 4th Annual Fraud Prevention Fair hosted by the Nevada Department of Consumer Affairs. Events were held in both Reno and Las Vegas, and provided a forum for persons throughout the community to receive comprehensive fraud prevention and assistance-related resources from various state and local agencies within their communities.

At the Las Vegas event, the Board participated in a fraud prevention panel discussion to highlight the dangers of unlicensed contracting activities and the threat these individuals pose to the wellbeing and safety of the public.

In addition, the Board discussed current scams and unscrupulous activities noticed with residential solar solicitations, highlighting the significance of signing contracts directly with the licensed contractor who will be performing the installation, understanding all finance terms before applying and/or finalizing the agreement, and always verifying the license of any contractor looking to perform work on one’s home.

Contractors encouraged to carry pocket cards

The Nevada State Contractors Board continuously reminds property owners to check contractors’ pocket identification cards before agreeing to proposals, signing contracts or engaging construction work.

NSCB encourages all licensed contractors to carry the pocket cards while on the job and especially in situations where they think they might be soliciting business.

The cards include NSCB’s logo and the state seal in addition to the license number, business name, classification(s), and license expiration date. One card is issued upon issuance and renewal of the license. NSCB allows contracting companies to purchase additional cards at $10 each to distribute to key on-site personnel to use when customers inquire about services.

To obtain additional pocket cards, call the Board offices at 702-486-1100 in southern Nevada or 775-688-1141 in northern Nevada.
Continued Education & Training

Technology has changed the way different industries operate. It has even changed the construction industry. In order to keep up with changing technology and information, it has become a necessity to continually seek training and education. If you are interested in furthering your education and training your employees, please click on links to various OSHA safety, construction and computer courses. Links will direct you to various educational institutions located in Northern and Southern Nevada. Contact information will be listed, so please direct any questions regarding the courses to the educational institutions.

Continuing education is not required in order to maintain a Nevada contractor’s license.

The Nevada State Contractors Board is seeking suitable locations for its unlicensed contractor sting operations. Homeowners, business owners and residential property developers interested in volunteering their sites can contact the Board’s Director of Investigations, Paul Rozario.

“Stings not only protect the health and safety of the public from unqualified and sometimes dangerous people, they also protect the financial welfare of licensed contractors by removing illegal and unfair competition,” NSCB Executive Officer Margi A. Grein said.

Investigators in the Contractors Board’s Reno and Henderson offices conduct stings regularly throughout the state. Recently constructed homes and vacant small business locations and offices are ideal locations for the undercover operations.

During a sting, investigators pose as property owners. They schedule appointments with suspected unlicensed individuals to visit the location and provide estimates for work including painting, floor covering, plumbing, electrical, and landscaping. It is illegal in Nevada to perform any construction or home-repair project valued at more than $1,000 any plumbing, heating, electrical, HVAC work, regardless of cost, without a license. Evidence the Board collects from stings is turned over to district attorney’s offices for criminal prosecution.

“Unlicensed contractors often do not carry workers compensation insurance and have not undergone the Board’s extensive criminal background check. This puts consumers’ finances and possibly their physical safety in jeopardy,” Grein said. “In addition, home repair and improvement projects performed by unlicensed contractors takes millions of dollars away from legitimate contractors each year.”
